The scholastic baseball series will get under way this afternoon at American League Park, when the Technical High School team meets Guild Men's Central nine at 2:30.

It looks very much as if the first conflict will be between two of the strongest clubs in the series, though none, except Central, has shown a winning tendency in its games in the preliminary season.

Many think Central will come through with a victory, though predictions made relative to a series in which school baseball are nearly always likely to be astray.

Cox is pretty likely to be on the mound for Central, and either Hurd or Stowers will hurl for Tech. Cox is a veteran, being in his fourth year. He ought not to be bothered with the strange pitch which generally assails the school hurlers on their first appearance in the series. Hurd and Stowers have sufficient ability to win in any contest either pitcher against a school team if their talents be rightly used.

Mr. Harry Shurtliff, well known among the local amateur ball tossers, will handle the umpiring.
